

Did You Know?

Babies are born with the ability to distinguish sounds in any language.

The brain is best prepared to learn multiple languages during infancy and early childhood. Adults can help with language development.

- Be sure your baby spends a lot of time hearing people speaking both languages
- Don't rely on videos or recordings; communicating with real live people is more effective
- If your baby does not respond to language, have their hearing checked to be sure they can hear clearly
